

I would like to thank David Hay and Doug Balson of Information Partnership for the work they have accomplished for BCCF over the past two years. During this time they conducted two Let's Talk Families surveys and assisted BCCF in other operational and strategic planning areas such as building partner relationships, supporting staff with migration of our contact software and use of surveys as an ongoing communication tool. Anyone familiar with conducting quality research of the size and nature of the 2014 Let's Talk Families, BC! survey will appreciate the value we have received over the past two years. Their investment in BCCF and this project is a testimony to their sincere interest in improving life for all BC Families.

Thank you.

Introduction and Project Background

There are currently no active surveys or associated reports that provide overviews of issues facing BC families. The TAG project and the Let's Talk Families BC! initiative are unique and an essential addition to information that informs all families, community service providers, policy makers and businesses about important issues facing BC families.

The BC Council for Families (BCCF) is acting through its TAG Project to more actively engage and support BC families and the professionals and organizations that serve them. A goal of Let's Talk Families BC! is to build BCCF's network of BC Families and in particular to expand the network to include a greater cross section of BC Families.

Major activities for the project have been two surveys. The first survey engaged primarily with community social services representatives and asked for their perspective of the challenges facing BC families, primarily through the experiences of consumers of community social services. The second survey has engaged with a broader representation of the BC public and asked about the challenges facing families in BC directly from the perspective of the lives of survey respondents.

2014 Survey Goals and Objectives

The major goal of the survey was to engage with BCCF contacts, partner organizations and BC families. The objectives of the engagement were to understand how BC families talk about the challenges and issues they face in their lives. In particular, do BC families talk about challenges and issues in ways that are different than family service professionals?

Methods

An internet-based sample survey was conducted in summer and fall 2014. Respondents were solicited in four ways:

1. Direct email invitation to BCCF contact database
2. Partner Organizations distributed information about the survey to their networks of contacts
3. Snowball – Contacts of BCCF and Partner Organizations distributed survey information to friends and acquaintances
4. Social media (e.g. tweets), newsletters and other communication vehicles by BCCF and Partner Organizations

Data was collected from survey respondents over the period July 2014 – October 2014. Responses were received from over three thousand BC residents (N=3,098).

Open-ended questions explored the reported family challenges in detail. The survey received over 12,000 comments and stories from BC families.

Meeting Survey Goals and Objectives

The survey successfully engaged with BCCF contacts and 35 partner organizations. Over three thousand respondents comprising current BCCF contacts, partner organization contacts and members of networks of BCCF and partner organizations participated in the survey.

Respondents are geographically representative of all BC families based on postal codes of BC households.<sup>1</sup>

Respondents were able to report challenges and issues in their own words. In the 2013 Let's Talk Families BC! survey, respondents were limited to choosing from a pre-set list.

The sampling methods do not guarantee that the participating respondents are completely representative of the population of all BC families. The size of the respondent population, the geographic representativeness and the quality and quantity of responses give us confidence that the results have sound external validity.

More than thirty BCCF Partner Organizations were actively engaged in soliciting respondents for the 2014 survey. Many of these partner organizations (23) created unique survey collectors to track respondents that were solicited through their organizational networks. BCCF worked closely with organizations serving Aboriginal Peoples to solicit respondents from these populations.

Quantitative Survey findings - Topline

This report provides detail on the open-ended responses to questions asking about challenges and issues facing BC families<sup>2</sup>.

Also available are topline frequencies for all questions from the 2014 survey in an online report at this link: <https://fluidsurveys.com/account/surveys/557366/reports/1395706/>

The key messages from the topline report are:

- Respondents for household were primarily female (9 out of 10)
- Over 60% reside in urban settings
- Over 60% report family incomes of $50,000 or more
- 13% report family incomes of $29,000 or less
- Four out of five respondents reported children living at home
- Approximately one in 10 respondents (11%) identify as First Nations, Metis or Inuit
- All respondents faced one or more challenges to their family's health and well-being
- A majority of respondents reported frequent challenges to their family's health and well-being
- Descriptions and discussions of these challenges provided in the open-ended survey responses reveal that challenges are highly interrelated and interconnected for BC families

VERBATIM COMMENTS FROM SURVEY RESPONDENTS

The convention for reporting verbatim comments is to use the exact wording and formatting provided by survey respondents.

Errors in spelling, grammar and unconventional use of language are maintained.

Survey findings – Open-ended Questions

Three questions asked respondents about 1) challenges in their community; 2) the challenges facing their families; and 3) the frequency they face those challenges. A follow-up question asked if any family challenges were missed by the survey questions. Responses received were consistent with the list of challenges previously identified.

The challenge lists were based on the 2013 survey lists created by survey and family experts. Only 483 responses were received to the question about missed challenges and the majority of the comments were consistent with the existing challenge list.

The major finding from the questions reporting on frequent challenges is that family challenges are interrelated and interconnected. A majority of comments contain reference to more than one challenge.

The most frequent challenge BC families face is income. Almost 9 of 10 respondents (88%) reported income as a challenge. One in three respondents (35%) reported income was a frequent challenge; only 1 in 10 (12%) reported income was never a challenge.

What is it about income that is a challenge?

When respondents were asked “what is it about income that is a challenge for you or your family?” almost 1 in 3 people talked about job or job security (31%) or balancing income and expenses (30%). Just under 1 in 10 said the challenge was being able to afford basic necessities (9%) while 7% said the challenge was related to access or quality of income support benefits. Access to childcare was mentioned as an income challenge for two primary reasons – it was unaffordable and/or being unable to access childcare stopped individuals from earning income.

Table 1: Example income challenge comments

Income Challenge	Sample Verbatim Comment
Job or Job Security	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Lack of stability in jobs</li> <li>• High cost of living, and sporadic (seasonal) employment.</li> <li>• Job security. low pay but long hour work</li> </ul>
Balance Income & Expenses	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• The pay does not cover expenses.</li> <li>• Not enough to live in our community - even though we work full time in decent paying jobs!</li> <li>• Making each paycheck cover the expenses</li> </ul>
Benefits (Access or Quality)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Not enough income through social services</li> <li>• The irony is, the high income that we bring in leaves us out of obtaining services for our children. We cannot access free/low cost programs because we live in a high tax bracket. We cannot afford to do what we would like with our children because we are working to pay down debt, afford to live and pay for daycare. We pay the equivalent to 3 mortgages per month and have little left for food, clothing, birthday parties, or extra-curricular activities.</li> </ul>
Childcare	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• We don't qualify for subsidy so if I go to work at $15 an hour it will cost about that much to pay for daycare so I'm working to pay for someone else to watch my children or I'm unemployed.</li> </ul>
Necessities	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• We don't make enough to support everyone in our family.</li> <li>• Having enough at the end of the month to pay for rent and food.</li> <li>• Money runs out before the end of the month</li> </ul>
Restricts Activity	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Not enough after mortgage payment for extra things for family to do together.</li> <li>• I make $16 per hour and work part time because I can't afford to work full time and pay for afterschool care. My husband makes $22 per hour and works full time. We have a mortgage, insurance on two vehicles, plus the daily household expenses. Most months we are stretched to the max, working to make the paycheck last and not having to dip into the credit line. We are a loving family, we never have enough money to take family vacations. We live a very simple life. It would be nice to have an option of having child care supplemented at our income level. At the wages we make we are just over the income threshold for childcare supplementation. I don't understand how that could be.</li> </ul>
Disability	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Debt, no child support, high cost of food for a child on a special medically required diet</li> <li>• Job stability with mental illness</li> <li>• Used our retirement funds to help raise our grandson with FASD</li> </ul>

Impact Health (individual or Family)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Not enough left over at the end of each month for any extras, or to plan for problems (I.e., car repair, dental work), or to plan for the future. Dental care is a HUGE problem for our family...can't afford even check-ups much less work on teeth. Pain and worry for the future.</li> <li>• Constant stress, always behind with money available to pay bills...spending more than we make...</li> </ul>
Savings	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Can't make enough money to get ahead.</li> <li>• Rising costs , increase in taxes at all levels, fixed income , depletion of savings and rasp funds</li> <li>• Making ends meet. no savings.</li> </ul>
Second Job or Earner	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• I need a second income. I'm currently looking for part time work. I need to moonlight in order to survive.</li> <li>• Expenses outweigh the income, need to work two jobs to keep family in working order, but then I am challenged as a single parent who can't be home enough due to work, to be there for the kids, and cope with my own fatigue and caring for elderly, infirm parents.</li> </ul>
Taxes or Fees	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Cannot save for retirement , to much tax paid</li> <li>• High taxes is not letting us to think of tomorrow. I work more I pay more taxes. All the benefit will be cut off if we pass the line and moving to the next leave of income</li> <li>• Cost of taxes and fees, Property values decreasing now for over seven years, Cost of fees for children's program it cost me $100 just for my daughter to play basketball in the gym during lunch no teacher? School fees are crazy! Causing so many children not being able to participate in programs</li> </ul>

Effectiveness - Services used to help address income challenges

Less than half (29%) of respondents said they used community services to help address the income challenge. Over half (57%) of respondents who did access community services to help them with their income challenge reported the service did not meet their needs.

Yes	185	29.0%
No	453	71.0%
Total: 638

Over half of respondents who access community services to help them with an income challenge say the service did not meet their needs.

Job or job security concerns and balancing income and expenses were the two most common related challenges talked about in people's comments about income. Paying for necessities was referenced next in frequency in comments about challenges related to income.

When Jobs or Employment is the challenge

More than 4 out of five respondents (82%) reported jobs or employment was a challenge for their family. About 1 in 4 respondents (24%) said jobs or employment was frequently a challenge while over one-third (35%) said jobs or employment was sometimes a challenge.

What is it about jobs or employment that is a challenge?

When people were asked “what is it about jobs or employment that is a challenge for you or your family?”, 3 out of 10 people said no job available (31%) or the jobs available were associated with low wages and/or insufficient hours (requiring multiple jobs) (29%). One in 10 said job security (10%) was a challenge. Education or training and health related challenges was cited by 8% of respondents while 7% said the challenge was related to care (child or parent).

Having no job or having to have multiple jobs due to low wages or hours were common related challenges talked about in people’s comments about job or employment challenges. Job security was referenced next in frequency in comments about challenges related to jobs or employment.

When Education is the challenge

Nearly 4 out of 5 respondents (77%) reported education was a challenge for their family. About 1 in 5 respondents (19%) said education was frequently a challenge while one-third (33%) said education was sometimes a challenge.

What is it about education that is a challenge?

When people were asked “what is it about education that is a challenge for you or your family?” almost 1 in 3 people said quality (29%). About 1 in 5 households talked about the cost of education (21%) or challenges associated with learning/care support needs. Close to 1 in 10 of the comments suggest location of education is a challenge while another 3% mentioned transportation challenges. Options and choice of education choices were mentioned in 7% of comments while 3% of comments talked about childcare as a challenge related to education. The teachers strike took place during the survey and not surprisingly 11% of comments made direct reference to the labour disruption.

Effectiveness - Services used to help address education challenges

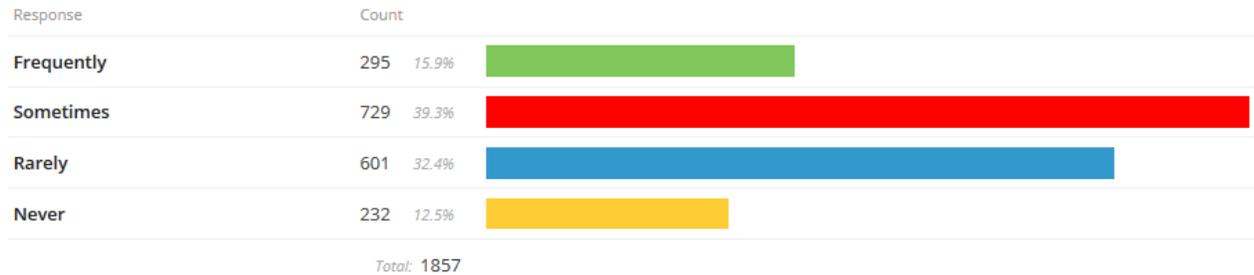

Almost half (49%) of respondents said they used community services to help address their education challenge. Over half (57%) of people who did access community services to help them with their education challenge reported the service did not meet their needs.

When Physical Health is the challenge

More than 4 out of 5 respondents (87%) reported physical health as a challenge for their family. Physical health was a frequent challenge for 16% of families associated with these families while almost 2 in 5 respondents (39%) report physical health was sometimes a challenge. About 1 in 3 respondents (32%) report physical health is rarely a challenge for them or a family member.

What is it about physical health that is a challenge?

When people who said physical health was a frequent challenge were asked “what is it about physical health that is a challenge for you or your family?” about 1 in 3 (32%) of all comments talked about the specific physical injury, disease or diagnosis. Over one quarter (27%) of comments include reference to system quality while 1 in 4 comments contain reference to lifestyle as a challenge. Financial cost is talked about as a challenge in 1 in 10 comments. Three percent of comments refer to mental health challenges and 1% of comments contain reference to childcare and environmental challenges related to physical health.

When Caring for Family Members is the challenge

Four out of five respondents (82%) reported caring for family members was a challenge for their family. Slightly more than 1 in 5 households (22%) said caring for family members was frequently a challenge while slightly less than 2 in 5 (37%) said caring for family members was sometimes a challenge. About a quarter of households (23%) reported caring for a family member was rarely a challenge. About a quarter of households (23%) reported caring for a family member was rarely a challenge.

What is it about caring for family members that is a challenge?

When people were asked “what is it about caring for family members that is a challenge for you or your family?” the most frequent challenge was associated with parental care (30%). One in five comments reference challenges associated with time (schedule, exhaustion, self-care) while 15% of comments talk about service availability, access, quality or fit to family needs. Child care challenge shows up in 14% of comments. Financial challenges such as cost of services or impact on someone’s ability to work are found in 1 of 10 comments. Housing is a challenge in 2% of comments as is challenges associated with disability.

When a Legal Issue is the challenge

Just over half of respondents (54%) reported they or family member had a legal challenge. Only 5% said legal challenges were frequent while 16% said legal challenges happened sometimes. Most of the time this challenge happened rarely (33%) for themselves or a family member.

What is it about legal issues that is a challenge?

When people were asked “what is it about legal issue that is a challenge for you or your family?” the most frequent challenge was associated with access to legal services (51%). Almost 1 in 3 comments reference obtaining fairness or justice as the challenge. About 1 in 5 comments are associated with quality of legal services as the challenge.

What can Business, Non-Profits, Government do?

People were told that business, non-profits and governments all contribute to family health and well-being. Respondents were asked questions on whether they thought each of business, non-profits and governments were doing too little, enough or more than their fair share to support families.

Respondents who replied that businesses, non-profits or governments are doing too little were given the opportunity to respond to an open-ended question, "what do you think [businesses/non-profits/governments] could do to support the needs of you and your family?"

SUMMARY

Key messages

- The second Let's Talk Families BC! survey was successful with a high response rate and wealth of open-ended responses
- The family challenges list is highly representative of the issues facing BC families
- Family challenges are highly interrelated and interconnected
- Responses represent the complexity of the lives of BC families
- Income and adequate resources are fundamental for BC families
- Respondents clearly identified governments and business/employers as doing too little to support BC families
- There are a wide range of suggestions for actions for businesses, governments and non-profit organizations

Public engagement (the Challenge)

Prior to TAG and Let's Talk Families BC! the BCCF did not have anything it could use as a direct appeal for BC Families to register with BCCF. TAG and Let's Talk Families BC! provide BC Families with a reason to engage with BCCF based on a desire to tell their stories and help improve programs and services for BC families.

How familiar are you with the BC Council for Families?

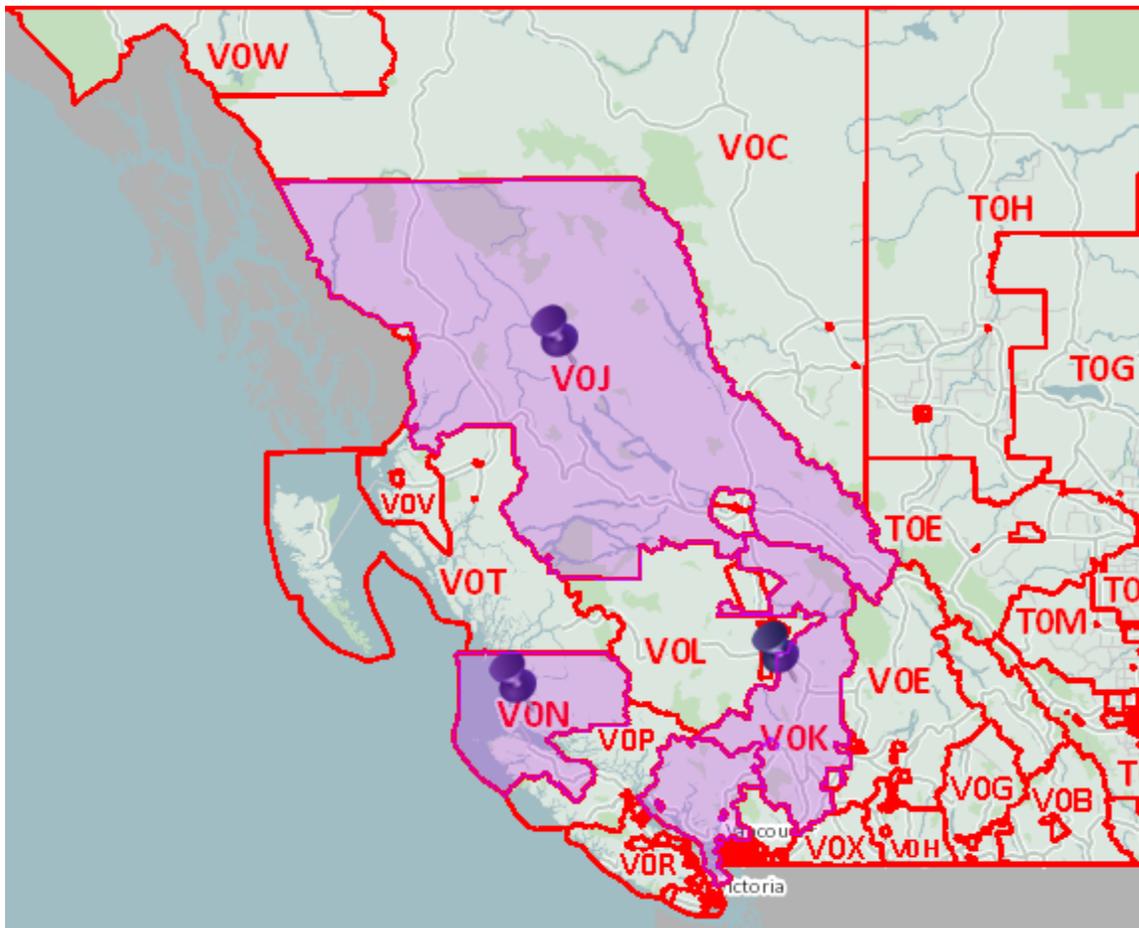

Over half of respondents (58%) are not very familiar with the BC Council for Families. Just over 4 in ten respondents (42%) are very or somewhat familiar with the BCCF.

The Benefits of Continued Engagement

In the short term building BCCF's network of BC Families participating in these surveys will result in additional BCCF website traffic and cumulating evidence about what BC families feel about their lives – the challenges and opportunities they face. One outcome of building website traffic will be bringing professionals and organizations registered with the BCCF website into closer proximity to BC Families that need their services. This will help to increase awareness of BCCF programs and make the site more attractive to the professionals and organizations that pay to register/market themselves at the BCCF website. A desired long-term outcome is to use evidence obtained from BC Families to make policies and programs in support of BC families more reflective of the needs and desires of BC families and community family service providers.

Appendix A – Survey Respondent Households

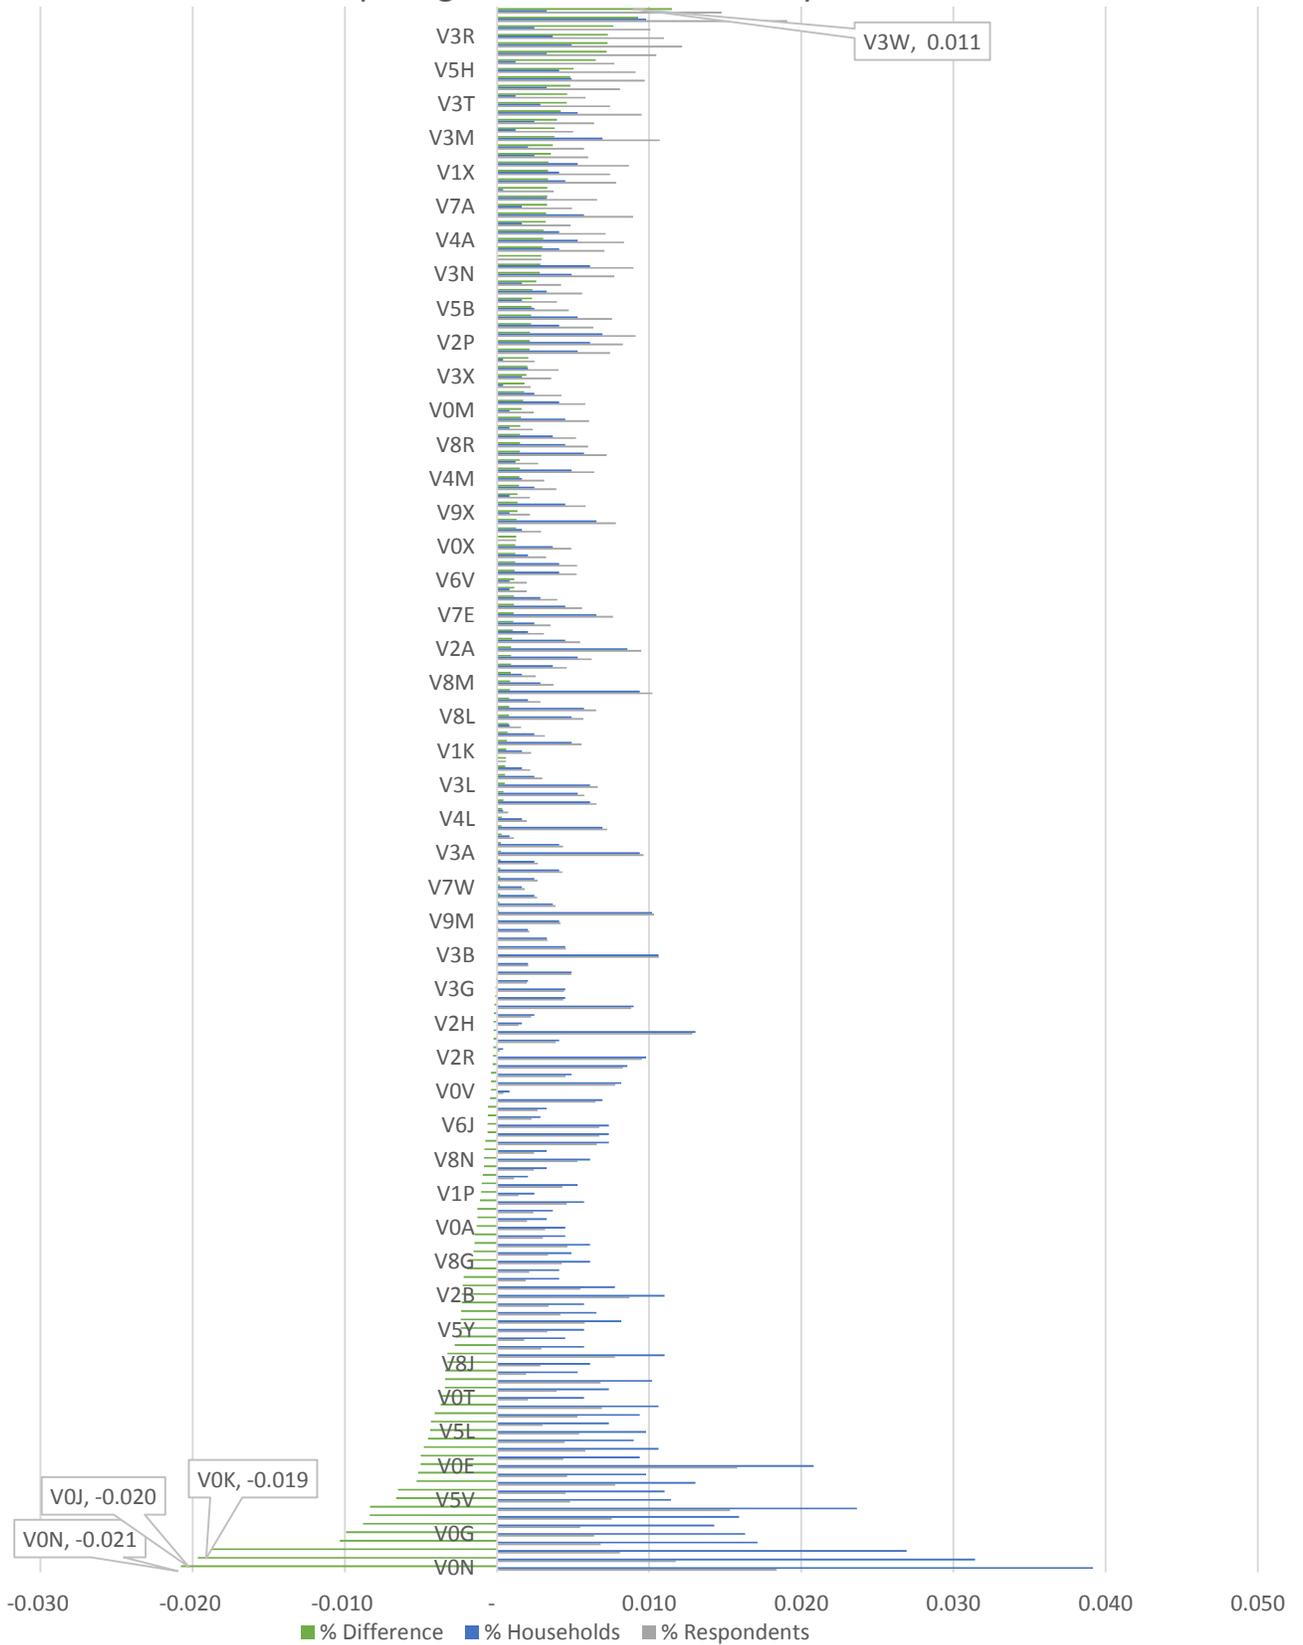

The sample is distributed proportionally to the distribution of BC Households according to household counts for BC’s postal codes (FSA). There are only four (4) FSA’s where the difference in the distribution of survey respondents and 184 occupied dwelling counts is greater than  $\pm 10\%$ . In three of the FSA’s<sup>3</sup> (VOJ, VON, VOK) the difference is negative (under represented) and in one FSA (V3W) the difference is positive (over represented). The distribution of survey respondents is within  $\pm 10\%$  of occupied dwelling counts for 98% of BC’s Forward Sortation Areas.

Household respondents are disproportionately female. Male respondents tended to be older and report higher household incomes than female respondents. Both males and females ranked how frequently they experience challenges similarly (Income, Children’s Care, Jobs, Caring for other family member). Slightly fewer females said physical health was a frequent challenge (6%) compared to men (8%). Division of labour research suggests that women continue to perform most of the family labour duties and are excellent informants regarding the issues and challenges facing families.

Appendix B – Qualitative Analysis

Historically open-text analysis has been a task that was laborious and fraught with issues of validity and reliability. The overarching goal is, essentially, to turn text into data for analysis. High-quality information is typically derived from text through the identification of patterns and trends and includes text categorization, text clustering, concept identification and classifications as well as comment summarization. Innovations in natural language processing software have automated the task improving validity and reliability as well as reducing processing time.

Our text analysis was done using Semantria's Open-Text analysis software. The Concept Matrix is a key component in Semantria's deep learning algorithms that enable it to understand people's responses to questions in a human-like manner. The Concept Matrix uses Wikipedia's knowledge to understand and measure the semantic distances between words. Wikipedia is an encyclopedia, a dictionary, a thesaurus, a collection of semantic word nets-- in short, it's the largest source of knowledge on the internet. Every word links to other words, giving context and exposing relationships. Using the Semantria software, we built a set of accurate categories to code respondent survey answers quickly, efficiently and reliably.

Analysis – Facets, Themes

We used Semantria's Natural Language Processing capability to help identify common themes across all responses. Semantria terminology is "Facets and Themes." Facets are key-words contained in each response to a question and are reported listing the most frequently accompanying descriptors. Facets rely on Subject Verb Object (SVO) parsing. In contrast, themes are noun phrases extracted from people's answers using Lexical Chaining. Lexical Chaining links sentences through synonyms or related nouns to establish a conceptual chain in the content. The process takes context and noun-phrase placement into account when identifying themes.

To do these two tasks the software first breaks each respondent's answer into its basic parts of speech, called POS tags, which identify the structural elements of a sentence (e.g. nouns, adjectives, verbs, and adverbs). After Semantria identifies the POS tags there are two simultaneous steps that occur:

1. Potential themes are extracted from POS tags
2. A process called Lexical Chaining occurs

Combined, Facets and Themes provide important insight into the ideas and thoughts contained in a response and give information used to construct user categories (Challenges) we described in this report.

BCCF Open Text Analysis

The following describes the analysis of responses to all open-ended questions. Analysis started by creating a “Concept Matrix” of words and/or phrases that are representative of the 15 challenges listed in the survey. One way to think about the relationship between a challenge and the Concept Matrix is to think about the Concept Matrix as answering the question “what do you mean by that?” The word “that” is any one of the 15 challenges listed below<sup>4</sup>.

- |                         |                       |                               |
|-------------------------|-----------------------|-------------------------------|
| 1. Income               | 6. Children’s care    | 11. Transportation            |
| 2. Jobs or employment   | 7. Housing            | 12. Caring for family members |
| 3. Education            | 8. Community services | 13. Legal (System)            |
| 4. Physical activity    | 9. Mental health      | 14. Violence                  |
| 5. Neighbourhood safety | 10. Physical health   | 15. Food                      |

For example, the challenge “Violence” used the following concept matrix to tag any comments that talk about “Violence”.

Challenge	What do we mean by “Violence” (Concept Matrix)
Violence	drug trade, arraignment, assault, vandalism, burglary, victim, criminal, abused

It should be remembered that Semantria is not searching for these concept matrix words but uses these words in a “fuzzy logic” and human way to look for any comment that has similar related content.

Some of the challenges listed in the survey used multiple Concept Matrix searches in order to increase the likelihood of tagging a comment. For example, we found that people’s comments about food fell into three categories: 1) Groceries; 2) Meals; and, 3) Quality. We used three concept matrix groups to help identify any comment that contained references to “Food”.

Challenge	What do we mean by “Food” (Concept Matrix)
Food Groceries	fruit, meat, vegetable, food, groceries
Food Meals	eat, hungry, diet, lunch, breakfast, dinner, meal, mealtime
Food Quality	human nutrition, organic foods, genetically modified food, Food CONTEXT nutrition

When two or more concept matrix groups were used to identify a “Challenge” we combined the results for final analysis. Consequently, a comment that is identified as containing a reference to food may include reference to groceries, meals or quality of food.

Additional Challenges

Not all comments fall nicely into the list of challenges used in the survey. We also asked respondents to tell us “what is it about an issue” that is a challenge. Consequently we developed and used additional “Challenges” and associated concept matrices for content that was not captured using the 15 survey challenges listed.

For example, when we search responses to the question asking people to explain what they mean when they say their family frequently face “physical activity” challenges our “physical activity” concept matrix correctly identifies this as a comment about the challenge of getting physical activity and that income (affordability) is one associated challenge. However, we did not initially have a concept matrix that would identify that winter time was also a challenge for physical activity.

“Winter is a time that really affects us. We would love to have more indoor physical activities that are affordable. (Family of 6)”

Comments with references to weather showed up in response to other questions as well as the question about physical activity. For example, in response to the question “what is good about your community” and “what other challenges did we miss”. Consequently, a concept matrix was created to identify comments that make reference to geographic location (physical geography or weather).

Challenge	What do we mean by “Environment” (Concept Matrix)
Place Geography	geography, natural environment, habitat, landscape, rivers, lakes, mountains
Place Weather	meteorologist, temperature, snow, storm rain, winter, weather NOT depression

The following table lists all challenges and the associated concept matrix used for Semantria analysis of open-ended text.
